David DiBiase is an educator and lifelong student of what the U.S. Department of Labor calls the “Geospatial Technology Industry.” He has taught for Penn State University since 1989 and founded its “World Campus” online certificate and master’s degree programs in GIS. From 2011-2019, he also served as leader of Esri’s Education Industry and Business Development teams. He was editor-in-chief of the first editions of the GIS&T Body of Knowledge and the U.S. Department of Labor’s Geospatial Technology Competency Model. He also led the NSF-funded GIS Professional Ethics project and continue to curate the collection of ethics case studies at gisprofessionalethics.org. His interests include the future of GIS work, professional ethics, and e-learning design. In 2018 he was inducted as a Fellow of the American Association of Geographers.
