Dr. Carolynne Hultquist is associated with the Pennsylvania State University and Columbia University. Hultquist teaches spatial data science for decision making and specializes in developing computational methods to integrate sources to better understand complex environments. Her recent publications involve the validation of crowdsourced data for environmental hazards as well as characterizing uncertainty in the representation of geosocial data. She holds a Ph.D. from Penn State in geography and social data analytics.